Administrative/Biographical History:

---

Mrs. Margaret Williamson Menzies Campbell studied medicine at St. Andrews University, graduating from there in 1918 and then practising for a little while in Glasgow. She then married Dr John Menzies Campbell and worked in partnership with him, sharing in all his work and scholarly interests, which she continued after his death in 1974. She endowed lectures at universities, which she stipulated were to be exclusively devoted to the history of dentistry. In 1977 she became the first woman ever to be granted an Honorary Dental Fellowship by the College.
